European Schools History Syllabus Years 6 and 7

Introduction

History and the past are not the same thing. Nor is history the mere study of the past. History is a process of imaginative reconstruction and interpretation of the past. It is the critical investigation of both the sources that the past has left behind and what historians have written about the past.

Students of history come to appreciate the relative nature of historical knowledge. Each generation produces history that reflects its own preoccupations and the new evidence that becomes available. History offers opportunities for empathetic understanding, but also develops the capacity for critical distance. It requires students to make comparisons between similar and dissimilar solutions to common human situations, whether they are political, economic, social or cultural. It invites comparisons between, but not judgments of, different cultures, political systems and national traditions.

The age of the previous syllabus, which entered into force in 2000, the new requirements of the baccalaureate, the diverse geographical and national backgrounds of European school students, along with the need to take new methodological approaches into account meant that a reform of the history syllabus for years 6 and 7 had become necessary.

The history of Europe from 1914 to the present day has a prominent place in the syllabus as a compulsory core course studied by both 2 period and 4 period students throughout years 6 and 7. By placing greater emphasis on the experience of populations, the diverse regions and states of Europe, and the importance of teaching social, as well as political and economic history, this syllabus better reflects the complexity and diversity of our continent’s contemporary history. The second part of the syllabus allows students to acquire further historical knowledge with a more thematic approach which takes into account recent historiography and emphasises a greater awareness of the world through the study of other areas and continents.

This programme aims to make a significant contribution to the development of future European citizens, endowing them with a critical spirit and an awareness of heritage, ready to play an active role in the 21st century world.
1. General Objectives of the European Schools

The European Schools have the two objectives of providing formal education and of encouraging pupils’ personal development in a wider social and cultural context. Formal education involves the acquisition of competences – knowledge, skills and attitudes across a range of domains. Personal development takes place in a variety of spiritual, moral, social and cultural contexts. It involves an awareness of appropriate behaviour, an understanding of the environment in which pupils live, and a development of their individual identity.

These two objectives are nurtured in the context of an enhanced awareness of the richness of European culture. Awareness and experience of a shared European life should lead pupils towards a greater respect for the traditions of each individual country and region in Europe, while developing and preserving their own national identities.

The pupils of the European Schools are future citizens of Europe and the world. As such, they need a range of competences if they are to meet the challenges of a rapidly-changing world. In 2006 the European Council and European Parliament adopted a European Framework for Key Competences for Lifelong Learning. It identifies eight key competences which all individuals need for personal fulfilment and development, for active citizenship, for social inclusion and for employment:

1. communication in the mother tongue
2. communication in foreign languages
3. mathematical competence and basic competences in science and technology
4. digital competence
5. learning to learn
6. social and civic competences
7. sense of initiative and entrepreneurship
8. cultural awareness and expression

The European Schools’ syllabuses seek to develop all of these key competences in the pupils.

2. Didactic Principles

The aims of this program are based on specific methodological objectives. By the end of their studies, students will have developed the following skills:

- an understanding of history as a discipline, including the nature and diversity of its sources, methods and interpretations
- an understanding of the present through critical reflection upon the past
- an understanding of the impact of historical developments at national, European and global levels
- an awareness of one’s own historical identity through the study of the historical experiences of different cultures
- an ability to understand, express and discuss historical ideas and concepts in a foreign language (L2)

The learning and teaching of history are based on following didactic principles:

- approach: the different areas of the pupil’s learning are integrated
- active learning: pupils become responsible for their own learning process
Teaching Approaches for Year 6 & 7

- Written exercises produced during the course of the year
  - Essays
  - Source analysis
  - Research work (ICT, library)
- Homework – written and oral
- Participation in class discussion & activities
- Oral presentations
- ICT (blogs, forums, wikis, other virtual learning environment tools, podcasts, webquests, interactive whiteboards, digital film-making etc)
- Fieldwork
- Group work
- Role plays
- Projects
- Cross-curricular work
- Peer- and self-assessment

The above list is not exhaustive and not in order of importance.

3. Learning Objectives

The cyclical nature of learning history, where knowledge and skills are built and consolidated over the whole course, means it is essential that the skills below are covered throughout the syllabus, are introduced appropriately and depending on the context, are not treated in isolation, and are revisited during the course.

3.1 The gathering and sorting of historical evidence

Skills include:
- developing research skills of locating and selecting relevant and appropriate evidence, from books, articles, websites, audio-visual resources, and fieldwork.
- recognising the distinctions between different kinds of evidence: primary and secondary, textual, audio-visual, oral, graphic, tabular.

A student’s progress should be characterised by increasing confidence and independence in locating and using a variety of historical sources.

3.2 The evaluation of historical evidence

Skills include:
- recognising the subjective nature of the historical evidence
- examining sources for information and interpretations, and for cases where they corroborate, complement or contradict each other
- recognising the value and uses of sources, and reasons to use them cautiously
- recognising and appreciating why and how opinions and interpretations differ.

A student’s progress should be characterised by increasing awareness and acknowledgment of historical opinions and interpretations.
3.3 Recognising and understanding historical processes and their relationships to human experience, activity and motivation

Skills include:
• recognising, explaining and analysing causes and consequences • recognising, explaining and analysing continuity, change and development over time • recognising, explaining and analysing similarity and difference • relating human activities, experiences and motivations in history to a range of cultural and social dimensions • synthesising material studied across time and space.
A student’s progress should be characterised by a maturing appreciation of the nature of human experience in a range of contexts.

3.4 Organising and expressing historical ideas and information

Skills include:
• posing questions and hypotheses and answering or testing them • handling and synthesising several sources for one inquiry • selecting and deploying information and ideas • constructing narratives, with ideas, analysis and relevant substantiation • summarising and arriving at conclusions.
A student’s progress should be characterised by increasingly sophisticated and effective skills of oral and written communication.

By the end of year 6, students will have developed their skills and knowledge of European history up to 1945 and their knowledge of social, political, economic history based on European and global themes.

By the end of year 7, students will have developed their skills and knowledge of European History post 1945 and their knowledge of social, political, economic history based on European and global themes.

See section 4 for a more detailed description of knowledge areas gained in each year.

5. Assessment

5.1 Assessment Objectives
The assessment objectives for 4 period History are in italics.

Assessment objective 1: Knowledge and understanding
- Recall and select relevant historical knowledge
- Demonstrate understanding in an historical context
- Demonstrate an understanding of historical processes: cause and effect; continuity and change etc.
- Deploy accurate, relevant and detailed, in-depth knowledge of the past.

Assessment objective 2: Application and interpretation
- Present a summary of evidence
- Apply historical knowledge as evidence
- Compare and contrast sources as evidence about the past
- Show awareness that events in the past have multiple explanations
- Recognise different approaches to, and interpretations of, historical issues and events.

Assessment objective 3: Synthesis and evaluation
- Evaluate the utility of various types of sources as evidence about the past
- Synthesize evidence from both historical sources and background knowledge
- Evaluate the different approaches to, and interpretations of, historical issues and events.

Assessment objective 4: History communication skills
- Present balanced, coherent and focused historical explanations both orally and in written form
- Demonstrate the ability to produce analytical and/or evaluative written essays about historical issues and events in depth
- Demonstrate evidence of research skills, organisation and referencing. (In Year 6 personal research assignment.)
Attainment Descriptors

The attainment descriptors in italics apply to four period History only.

5.2 Formative Assessment (A mark)

Formative assessment is based on a variety of the teaching approaches outlined in the didactic principles plus
- Attendance and punctuality
- The student’s own effort to progress in the study of History
- Formal testing

In addition, for the year 6 four period History course, a personal research study is an obligatory element of this assessment in either the first or second semester. The teacher may apply a weighting to the value of this study of up to a maximum of 25% of the A mark in one semester.

5.3 Summative Assessment (B Mark)

2 Period Course - Years 6 & 7

The B mark is determined by 2 tests, each of 45 minutes duration per semester, i.e. 4 tests during the year. These tests should be based on source documents and should examine the historical skills highlighted in the assessment objectives.

4 Period Course - Year 6

The B mark is determined by two examinations, one in each semester, each of 2 hours 15 minutes duration. These examinations follow the question structure of the baccalaureate examination.

4 Period Course - Year 7

The B mark is determined by a 3 hour examination at the end of the first semester. This examination follows the question structure of the baccalaureate examination.

5.4 Baccalaureate Examination

The examinations will normally cover the year 7 syllabus, but will also test knowledge gained in previous years, especially year 6.

The Written Baccalaureate Paper

The baccalaureate examination is based on the year 7 European Core Course (Europe 4, 5, 6, 7) and the Year 7 Compulsory Theme Course (Themes 7.4A, 7.4B, 7.4C). The examination lasts 3 hours in total and is divided into two sections, of which 1 hour 30 minutes should be spent on each. The first part is an unseen source paper and the second part is a structured essay.

Part 1 – Source Paper

Part 1 is compulsory source paper with four questions based on 4 to 5 unseen sources, which will change every year. The fourth question is a synoptic question based on one of the ten sub-questions from year 7 European Core Units (Europe 4, 5, 6, 7) which requires synthesis, evaluation of unseen sources and contextual knowledge.

There should be 4 to 5 sources, of which at least one, maximum two, should be non-written, such as a cartoon, photograph, statistics or map. There should be a mix of primary and secondary sources. The sources in total should be no more than approximately 1000 words.

Part 2 – Structured Essay

This consists of 3 separate questions based on two or three of the compulsory year 7 themes.

The first question is a description based question requiring the skills of recall and selection of historical facts and knowledge. It requires knowledge of the key words in the syllabus and can be drawn from the key words box. There can be up to two sub-questions if the questions are more definition-based. The second question focuses on explanation, whereas the third question tests explanation and evaluation. The third question is based on one of the nine sub-questions from the Year 7 Compulsory Theme Units (7.4A, 7.4B, 7.4C).

Assessment of the Baccalaureate Examination

The written examination paper assesses the history assessment objectives from section 5.1. The objectives identified in the right-hand side of the tables below constitute the primary focus for each of the question types set.

In both written and oral assessments, language errors should only be taken into account if they impair communication of the historical facts and ideas.

The Baccalaureate Oral Examination

The oral examination consists of twenty minutes preparation time and twenty minutes oral examination time, including time for examiner deliberation. It consists of one question with sources and sub-questions which are based on the core course or theme course from year 7, but also draw on assumed knowledge and skills from year 6. No more than three sources should be used per question. Candidates choose one question by lot twenty minutes before the examination. Further information on the structure of the paper and the preparation of baccalaureate oral questions can be found in a teacher guidance document.

Knowledge and understanding, concepts and skills are assessed in the oral examination. The focus is on the range of knowledge, the level of evaluation and understanding of concepts, and the explanation and interpretation of sources, considering items such as content, meaning, importance and context, which are demonstrated by the student in the examination. In both written and oral assessments, language errors should only be taken into account if they impair communication of the historical facts and ideas. Questions for the four period course focus more on skills than knowledge, using higher-order skills, such as comparison and context, reliability and utility, and synthesis. The baccalaureate history oral examination marking grid provides teachers with a breakdown of these skills. Teachers are supplied with the marking grid and it must be used to assess students in the oral examination.

As with the optional units on war, genocide and women in S6, this unit is intended to provide an opportunity for teachers to examine themes through their change and continuity over the course of more than 100 years of history. Although obvious opportunities exist to provide reinforcement of more traditional political history, the intention of this unit is to recognise both the distinctive and inherent value of social and cultural history in their own right. The following thematic plan provides one possible approach, but alternative planning via chronology or types of popular culture might work equally well.

1. The Development of Mass Media (2 lessons)
Beginning with the key question ‘what is mass media?’ this first section explores how and why mass media has changed over the last 100 years. Technological innovation – print, cinema, radio, television, satellite and digital – provides a familiar entry point into the question of whether the ‘medium influences the message’ but additional possibilities exist. Changes in media ownership, social mores and economic prosperity have also, amongst much else, affected how mass media has developed.

2. Mass Media and Popular Culture (4 lessons)
This section centres on the relative importance of the mass media in influencing the development of popular culture. Beginning with the question ‘what is popular culture?’ we examine three case studies of popular culture – youth culture, cinema and sport – exploring how and why these have developed over the last 100 years. Whilst mass media has clearly influenced popular culture, this is an opportunity to examine the role of wider social and economic factors. For example, the medium of cheap, mass produced transistor radios influenced the development of American rock and roll music in the 1950s, yet the form and content of youth culture also owed much to musical tradition, economic prosperity and loosening morality. Similarly French Nouvelle Vague cinema owed much to the technical development of handheld cameras but even more to an aesthetic drive to challenge traditional, narrative cinema. Finally in the field of sport, live satellite broadcasts in the 1990s radically changed the viewing experience of the armchair sports fan, but was the advertising cash provided by transnational media empires that fundamentally transformed the nature of the sports themselves.

3. Mass Media, Popular Culture and Authority (4 lessons)
This last section examines the changing relationship between mass media, popular culture and authority, especially in state form. Mass media and popular culture can play a role in both reinforcing and undermining social, economic and political hierarchies. This is an opportunity to examine the changing nature of state propaganda, secrecy and censorship in both authoritarian and democratic state forms. It might equally be concerned with authority as represented by organised religion or big business. But it should also be an opportunity to examine the role of the mass media and popular culture as an independent and subversive force for change. This is about the battle of ideas and for public opinion that is fought out in the grey area between the authorities and civil society. If we take the conduct of war as an example, state propaganda has become increasingly sophisticated to deal with an educated populace. But the voices of dissent have always exploited new technologies to attack the official view, as was witnessed by the use of social media in the Arab Spring of 2011.

Theme - Post-war Europe (1945-1949)

Source 1 - A British newspaper cartoon from 1947

Cartoon by Leslie Gilbert Illingworth published in the Daily Mail, 16th June 1947.

Source 2 - A speech by the Hungarian communist, Matyas Rakosi

I consider the nationalisation of the big banks and big companies the most important event of this year. Its significance for the future, for the strengthening of the economic foundations of the People's Democracy is immeasurable. This economic transformation has political effects: the influence of capitalists on the economics and politics of our democracy is decreasing more and more. All you have to do is compare the 1st of January 1947 to the 1st of January 1948. At the beginning of 1947, it was the Party of the petty bourgeoisie which exercised the ascendancy of influence in the running of our country. This Party, on its own, had the absolute majority in Parliament and was threatening without limits the development of Hungarian democracy. Now, the biggest party in the country, and the biggest defender of Hungarian democracy, is the Hungarian Communist Party. The enemies of democracy, those who desire to go back to the feudal and reactionary system suffered a series of heavy defeats in 1947.

A declaration by M. Rakosi, General Secretary of the Hungarian Communist Party, Vice-President of the Council, made on New Year's Day, Budapest, 1948.

Source 3 - Economic exploitation: an analysis by a Hungarian historian

Hungary, as well as the other Eastern European countries, was excluded from the construction of Europe and their economies were deprived of the benefits of western technological advances. Instead, Eastern Europe was dragged along the path of an economic development dictated by Stalinist ideology and the needs of the Soviet military. The merchants of the Kremlin had every reason to be satisfied. This economic development would create a continual stream of riches from Hungary to the Soviet Union. It would contribute to the indisputable Soviet control and the sovietisation of Hungary, and last but not least, it would constitute a relatively sure way to cut the links with the west and destroy the only type of presence that the Americans wished to support.

Source 4 - A report of a private meeting between Averell Harriman, US ambassador to Moscow and President Truman 20 April 1945.

Ambassador Harriman said that in effect what we were faced with was a ‘barbarian invasion of Europe’, that Soviet control over any foreign country did not mean merely influence on their foreign relations but the extension of the Soviet system with secret police, extinction of freedom of speech, etc., and that we had to decide what should be our attitude in the face of these unpleasant facts. He added that he was not pessimistic and felt that we could arrive at a workable basis with the Russians but that this would require a reconsideration of our policy and the abandonment of the illusion that for the immediate future the Soviet Government was going to act in accordance with the principles which the rest of the world held to in international affairs.
